Dear colleagues,

on the occasion of preparations for the 18th year of proceedings of the Studia Bibliographica Posoniensia 2023, published by the University Library in Bratislava since 2006, we would on behalf of the editorial board like to address you with an offer to publish on the topic:

Non sine lucro sed in lucem editus: Book printing and publishing on the boundary between public interest and individual profit

The history of the typographic medium has since its very beginnings been accompanied by a narrative of public benefit and cultural significance, and printers have been active transmitters of this narrative. Despite long-standing research, there is still room for research studies into the impact of the printed medium in society.

This year, we are welcoming studies focusing on:

- The implementation of publishing projects,
- self-realisation and self-promotion of printers, publishers, translators, authors, and booksellers in a particular sociocultural environment influenced by political or religious conditions,
- rivalry between actors in the printing-publishing environment, profit, and commerce (e.g. reprinting, pirated reprinting...),
- the formation of the concepts of intellectual property and copyright on specific examples,
- the phenomenon of patronage and its transformation.

We look forward to your contributions!

Guidelines for authors:

Please send us your topic with an annotation of the contribution at latest by: 31. 3. 2023

We will notify whether your contribution is to be included in the proceedings by: 14. 4. 2023
